During the first night, most cabin groups stayed up and talked, But some went to sleep. Most people got to sleep around 11:00pm-12:00am. For the parents out there: discipline was used a lot. Most people woke up at 6:00-6:15am but there is always the occasional person (or group of people) that wake up at another time.

The 2nd night was a bit quieter and many people got to sleep sooner but a some people still stayed up. Personally, we (the article writers) think that this is because we had the group activity, 'Commando', which was very exhausting. Everyone had to wake up earlier to clean up and pack up (something lots of mothers know well!) for the ride home.

Everyone will definitely agree that camp was really fun and was WAY better than doing school work. Everyone was happy with their cabins and probably enjoyed all the activities and were cooperative and listened to their activity groups and their group leaders.
